

SEAL SEALANT puncture SQUIRT

Squirt is the South African brand a few years ago revolutionized the world of lubrication thanks to its famous wax. Since those early days of the firm, when we looked incredulous how something as dry as cleanly could lubricate our chain, Squirt has grown and the SEAL liquid sealant is one of his latest creations.

The first thing to be noted about this puncture sealant is not born from nothing. In fact, it is thanks to another South African company, leading manufacturers fraud over six years, which has been incorporated into select catalog of Squirt. However, the SEAL differs from his brother in color, moving away from the brown, dirtier.

Thus, the SEAL has a very ordinary appearance, whitish in color from creamy five to highlighting especially have a very strong odor. Once you pour the liquid on wheels (about 100 ml per wheel of 29 "is recommended), it will stick very well to the tire walls, creating a protective film that causes fluid to hold quite a while without drying.

We have tested this liquid in different covers, from the most straight- forward (which come standard on any bike) to UST models, and the result has always been very good. This protective layer that adheres to the tire makes it particularly suitable for porous or non-specific tubelizer tires.

During the test we submitted it to, but we suffered enough jabs without noticing them. And that's the best we can say with a liquid of this kind. When dismantle the covers after several weeks of use, the SEAL was fluid in large proportion, showing small balls of pink, the only part of the puncture sealant is not really liquid and acts as plugging leaks. The film formed inside this cover is kept long, and even a after removing the tire, this liquid remains inside, sticky as the first day. Certainly a highly recommended product.
